COR ROBOTICS

VIRTUAL CODRONES CAMP

COR Robotics' Stay-at-Home camps provide an awesome opportunity to keep your child engaged, entertained, and challenged. The camps will utilize fun and exciting CoDrones kits which will enable students to have fun while learning to program. The CoDrone kit will include a CoDrone Lite which you will get to keep after the class. Drones use a block based programming language which is perfect for entry level programmers. Students will program their drones to fly around and complete missions using a curriculum specifically designed for students to work through on their own. When they've mastered their programming, students can pair their drones to a bluetooth device and fly them manually for some extra fun! This could be a great birthday or holiday gift. Fee includes a CoDrone Lite drone, programming instructions and instructional support.

Raising Resilient Children in the 21st Century

Life is complicated for adults and even more so for children, who don't have an emotional maturity yet to sort through all the "stuff" going on. The number of children exposed to what we often call "traumatic stress" (events or situations that upset and overwhelm a child and their ability to cope) is growing and while we can't stop the world from happening around us we can help our children become resilient, to be happy and to thrive in spite of what is happening in their lives and the lives around them.

Signs that a child is struggling with stress include such things as loss of appetite, fearful of being separated from the caregiver, returning to bed wetting, thumb sucking and baby talking, and nightmares. For older children stress shows up at school with trouble concentrating, changes in their school work and worrying about their safety or others.

The good news, it's never too late to help your child develop resiliency skills! Resilience is the ability to bounce back from a stressful or traumatic experience. Here are some ideas to help your child experiencing over the top stress or who has experienced situations that overwhelmed them. And they are good for adults too!

- Did you know that doing one deliberate act of kindness a day increases a feeling of well-being? Simple things like holding a door open for someone makes your brain happy! Why stop at one a day, go for three. 😊
- Encourage your child to share the positive in his/her day.
- If your child feels like he/she can't do anything right, set small goals that would be easy to accomplish so they can experience the feeling of success. An example of a small goal might be reading a page in a book or setting the silverware at the dinner table.
- Sleep!!! Getting the proper amount of sleep helps with focus, memory, and steady those mood swings. For children that means 10 – 12 hours a night depending on their age. And don't forget about you! You need a minimum of eight hours a night.
- Everyone off the couch! Sitting all the time, fogs the brain.
- Healthy eating not only helps our overall physical health it is good for our brains too.
- Set aside a "no electronics" time in the daily schedule. The constant stimulation of video games, checking Facebook and texting our friends does not allow time for our brain to be calm.
- Provide consistent discipline that is appropriate for the child's age and development and that promotes learning and not punishing.
- Show affection through your words and actions. Let your child know it is okay to have their own feelings and opinions. Help them to learn ways to express them in way that gets their needs met.
- Care for yourself! Take time to do something you enjoy, eat healthy, get your rest, and seek out friends who are supportive and caring.

Plants! They are everywhere! During these next couple of weeks you are going to be a botanist (that is someone who studies plants). As every good scientist does, we will be documenting our findings through some really fun activities. Through these weeks and activities you will identify and describe parts of a sprouting seed or plant. Begin to learn about the functions of different parts of a plant. Identify characteristics that are the same or different across various seeds and plants. Identify some of the things a plant needs in order to grow: water, light, and time! Wow! What fun!
